NOVEMBER. Foll well I know the frozen hand has come That smites the sone of grove and garden dumb. And chills sad Antumn's last chrysonthemum. Yet would I find one blessom, if I might, Ere the dark loom that weaves the robe of white Hides all the wrecks of Summer out of sight. Semetimes in dim November's narrow day. When all the season's pride has passed away, As mid the blackened stems and leaves we stray, We spy in sheltered nook or rocky cleft A starry disk the hurrying winds have left, Of all its blooming eleterhood bereft; Some pansy, with its wondering baby eyes-Poor wayside nursling-fixed in blank surprise At the rough welcome of unfriendly skies; Or golden daisy; will it dare disclaim The lion's tooth, to wear this gentler name? Or blood-rod salvia, with its lips aflame; The storms have stripped the lily and the rose.

The careless winds of Autumn left behind. With these of earlier season's growth to bind. Ah me I my skies are dark with sudden griof, A flower lies faded on my garnered sheaf, Yet let the sunshine gild this virgin leaf. imitations of objects of art and nature." The joyous, blessed sunshine of the past, Still with me, though the heavens are overcast, The light that chines while life and memory last. Go, pictured thymes, for loving readers meant;

Still on the cheek the flash of Summer glows And all its heart leaves kindle as it blows.
